PREFACE.

THOUGH this is but the second volume of Who's Who Along the North Shore, the reception which it has received has been so cordial that an enlargement of nearly half a hundred pages has been necessary in this edition.

We have added more information, made what we had more complete, increased the number of illustrations, and otherwise made the book more attractive and interesting than before.

We had hoped this year to add the Christian and maiden names of the ladies. It seemed to us quite fitting that some notice be taken of a wife's presence other than that which the bare "Mrs.," in "Mr. and Mrs." gave. But so many hesitated sending this information that before we went to press not half had replied. Responses are coming in daily, however, and we hope to incorporate this feature next year. The responses were very prompt from Pride's Crossing, Beverly Farms, Manchester and that section, but in the vicinity of Marblehead and Cape Ann the per centage was so small that we were led to abandon the plan for this year.

We want to make Who's Who a standard compendium of facts concerning the North Shore: so replete with interest that all will want it, and so accurate, that all can rely upon.

THE PUBLISHERS.

THE NORTH SHORE.

The North Shore has continued to add to its many attractions. It has opened up many miles of woods roads that must be seen to be appreciated.

It is impossible to describe the joy one feels in strolling through these shady lanes which wind in and out among the hills, through the vales and across little rustic bridges which span tiny streams gliding between mossy banks and grassy hummocks away to the sea.

The North Shore has an unrivalled position as a summer resort.

It not only has the bold, rugged shore front that is lashed by the billows of the Atlantic but it possesses a wealth of verdure of evergreen and deciduous trees which cover every hill as far as the eye can reach and extend to the very waters edge.

This is in marked contrast to the South Shore of Masshchusetts Bay with its stretches of naked sand.

Its proximity to Boston and its macadamized roads place it far ahead of Bar Harbor whose only attraction is a rocky shore front.

Our magnificent residences nestling upon the hillsides scarcely visible from the highways compare most favorably with Newport with its marble palaces, where one is constantly annoyed by being exhibited to curious throngs in sight-seeing automobiles and with garrulous guides armed with the ever-present megaphone, and one seeking a summer home amid surroundings both inspiring and restful can find on the North Shore a retreat free from the cares of life, the buzz of the ticker and the distracting clatter of the trolley car.

GEORGE E. WILLMONTON.

A Western Girl's Description of a Trip Along the Shore,

Sent to her home newspaper in the State of Indiana

If you were reared in a New England family in which it was so customary to have creamed codfish for breakfast Sunday that the fish actually has a sacerdotal flavor about it yet; if in the twilight of Sunday evenings the father was used to tell enchanting tales of "when I was a boy," involving adventures and hairbreadth 'scapes to your kin who made a hard living by fishing off the Grand Banks; if you have read "Out of Gloucester" and "Captains Courageous," you will perhaps be interested in taking an easy chair voyage to the port of Gloucester, and, listening to the tale of a summer day's sail thither, wish that you had been on the good ship Cape Ann with five voyagers who laid their course in that direction one day last summer.

These five voyagers had three reasons for embarking on this short cruise—they desired the beautiful sail, they longed to see Gloucester, the town of many dreams, the town from which more craft leave for deep sea fishing than from any other in the world, and they hungered and thirsted for a shore dinner.

The Cape Ann does not resemble the Ark in any particular, save that she is a boat and sails the salt seas o'er; she is new, built on long, narrow lines with a view to speed, resplendent in dazzling white paint, with commodious, elegant saloons, and an orchestra. She sails from Boston at nine in the morning, arriving at Gloucester at eleven.

The ship hugs the shore all the way so that the sights of the sea are varied by the sights of the land. A coastwise journey is an ideal one, for in the distance all the little towns with their white painted houses, and an occasional flag staff or two look very beautiful; the lighthouses lose their appearance of grim desolation when seen through the magic veil of distance.

As you sail out of Boston harbor you get a good view of the city with its environs, South and East Boston; only it seems impossible to tell which is South Boston and which is East. With considerable confidence you find Bunker Hill monument over-topping the city. You would feel more confident that it is Bunker Hill monument if your party did not insist that the object you are gazing at through your glasses is one of the tall factory chimneys of East Boston.

As you sail along what is called the "North Shore," because it lies north of the Hub of the Universe, you can see Boston Light, Long, Green and Graves Islands, the Great and Outer Brewster and Fort Warren. Like all the forts that I have met this one is very disappointing from an external view; it looks very pleasant and harmless, and its beautifully terraced lawns make it appear more like a park than a grim fortification all in readiness to shell any hostile vessel which presumed to come into our waters. Fortunate it is that Fort Warren is beautiful, because the islands are low, bleak, barren looking places even under the blue of an August sky.

Leaving those islands behind us, we stood away north along the rugged Massachusetts coast. We passed Lynn, "which stretches out a slender arm with nobby Nahant at the end like a New Zealand war club," Longfellow had a summer cottage at Nahant, with the sea a-beating at his door. Here it was that he wrote "The Bells of Lynn." We passed Egg Rock with its light-house; Swampscott, with its gorgeous, glittering summer homes of the wealthy. We looked at Marblehead, recalling the terrible ride of Skipper Ireson, as told by Whittier; we thought of Hawthorne as we passed the entrance to Salem harbor, although we could not see the decaying custom house which his genius has made a point of interest.

The Cape Ann clipped along "with a bone in her mouth" all the way. The sea was sparkling, the wind was fresh, and there was a good sea on. If one were a "poor sailor," he sought the cabin, but otherwise one was busy enjoying the sea, the air and the coast, and trying to keep out of the wind and in the sun and on the absurd little camp stools furnished by the steamship company.

As we neared Gloucester we passed Magnolia, a wealthy and exclusive summer resort. The site was named long before the advent of pleasure seekers, from the curious fact that in this region, near the sea, the magnolia grows in profusion. This beautiful tree grows no farther north than this latitude, and, we have been told, is found growing naturally in no other part of Massachusetts.

Just off the coast of Magnolia lies a black, sinister looking reef, with a bell buoy perpetually tolling for those the cruel rocks have enticed to death—the reef of Norman's Woe. No one can look at it without a swelling of the heart in sympathy for the brave skipper of the Hesperus and his little daughter "with eyes as blue as fairy flax." Longfellow's poem "The Wreck of the Hesperus" is quickly recalled and takes on a vivid interest when the eyes can see the place where the tragedy was enacted:

> And fast through the midnight dark and drear,
> Through the whistling sleet and snow,
> Like a sheeted ghost the vessel swept > Tow'rds the Reef of Norman's Woe.
> She struck where the white and fleecy waves
> Looked soft as carded wool,
> But the cruel rocks, they gored her side
> Like the horns of an angry bull.

You can smell Gloucester before you are fairly disembarked. The familiar odor of salt codfish is in the air, but in greater bulk and intensity than you ever dreamed that it could be. As you go up the steep narrow street that leads from the wharf you pass the drying flakes, and here it is that the fish are being cured for market. The flakes are long frames about four feet wide, upon which the split fish are laid; the frames are covered with white cloths and the fish, under the coverings, are cured by the heat and light of the sun. There was nothing in the least unpleasant about the fish, unless you object to the smell, for the frames were clean and the cloths dazzling white.

But the fish were not the only tokens that you were in a town the inhabitants of which "go down to the sea in ships;" this narrow, crooked little street which you climbed is lined with dusty, smelly shops in which all sorts of fishermen's gear are displayed for sale. There are fishing lines of all sizes, from twine to small ropes; hooks in a like range of sizes; knives and implements for splitting and cleaning fish, oilskins from the souwester to the hip boots; many kinds of ship instruments, compasses and quadrants, and dozens of articles that you never saw before and of which you do not know even the names. One could have lingered half a day looking into the windows of these shops, making new discoveries every moment of things he had heretofore met only in books. But no; there was no time, this was strictly a pleasure excursion in which you must hurry every moment or you would miss the boat, to say nothing of the shore dinner.

You must take a trolley car and ride out to Long Beach, where the bluest water in the world dashes into the whitest foam on the jagged rocks. The dinner is served in a roomy pavilion, within sight and sound of the sea, with the wonderful salt sea air inciting you to breathe twice as fast and deep. The shore dinner is an institution as rooted in the heart of the New Englander as is the baked bean; one is for Saturday night; the other for summer excursions. Perhaps there are poor cooks in New England, but the writer never met one, and a shore dinner is a thing to be eaten, enjoyed and remembered. First, you are seated at a pretty, homey looking table, with clean linen and decent china and silver; the salads, pickles, relishes and fruit are on the table. An intelligent, well-mannered waitress, who is doubtless a school teacher or a college student during the winter, takes your order. You get, in a regular shore dinner, a fish chowder or a clam chowder, steamed clams and fried clams and fried lobster, with potato chips—the most perfect made—and fried mackerel and baked blue fish, all just exquisitely cooked, and fresh and sweet as fish can be.

Then if your capacity permits, you can have pie—delicious New England pie—and coffee or tea. So you see that a shore dinner has deservedly gained its popularity.

After dinner the voyagers had to take the first trolley back and hurry for the boat. There was no time to wander over this quaint old fishing town and look at the sail boats coming and going; no time to scrape acquaintance with fishermen who looked as if they could be beguiled into spinning a yarn for you; no time to go out to Rockport where the great Atlantic squadron was having daily manœuvres; no time to go to Magnolia, and choose a site for your summer home when your ship should come in.

As we regretfully sailed out of the harbor we were forced to admit that the city of our dreams—as is so often the case in life—was more alluring than the city of reality.

If we had been in Gloucester that spring day the great fleet set sail for the Grand Banks, with stout hearts and high hopes for the rich catch, which means a rude living and scant comfort for these fishing folk; or if we could be in Gloucester that sadder autumn day when the fleet comes home, some of the boats with a meagre catch and many of them with flag flying at half-mast, a signal sending terror and dread expectation to the hearts waiting on the wharves for who can be sure the lost one is not husband, son, father, brother, lover,—if we had been in Gloucester either of these days, then would we have seen the real thrilling life of the people. But to see Gloucester on a day in August to the most idealizing eyes, it looks only like a sleepy, smelly fishing port.

And far more interesting than any sail we saw that day were the boats, that in a heavy gale used to beat into Gloucester harbor in the tales the father told in the twilight of the Sabbath nights long ago.

MONUMENT MAKING

like any other high-grade artistic work, must be done by the most finished artists only, and with none but the best of materials.

My life work has been the making of memorials of every high-grade description. Only the finest of granite is used in making

MILLER MONUMENTS

Artists, not mere stone cutters, do the carving. The designs are original with me — made at some special suggestion of yours, if you like. No money expected unless the contract is fulfilled in all respects. My plant is equipped with all the labor-saving machinery, hence the price is kept at a minimum. And in dealing with me you deal direct with the manufacturer— one profit, one responsibility. Most memorial-sellers take orders, turn them over to a commission house, and have no direct responsibility to you.

My free book on memorials is mailed on request to those interested.

J. L. MILLER (SUCCESSOR TO THOMAS & MILLER) 49 Liberty St., Quincy, Mass.

Dr. H. F. Sears' residence at Beverly Cove

Lake Croft Inn

OPEN THE YEAR ROUND

Formerly the Winnepoyken Hotel

THIS is one of the oldest and best known hotels in Essex County, situated on Lake Chebacco, the largest of a chain of six lakes, in Hamilton, Massachusetts.

This Hotel has become famous for its Chicken Dinners and Steaks and is now owned and personally managed by the man who made Chicken Dinners famous at old Cooper Tavern in Arlington.

The roads are the best in the State for automobiling and driving, and Chebacco Lake affords excellent boating and fishing, also gunning in season. The house has been thoroughly renovated and refurnished and parties will find first-class accommodations. The rooms are large and the view from the windows is unsurpassed. A large veranda extends around the house where parties may have dinners served in the open air under the pines.

Parties coming via the Boston and Maine R. R., alighting at Wenham-Hamilton station, can obtain conveyance to Lake Croft Inn at A. C. Cummings' stable, opposite the depot; alighting at Pride's Crossing, conveyance may be had from Wyatt & Trout's stables; from Beverly Farms, conveyance at W. Low's stable, opposite depot. Stables connected by telephone.

Philip Stockton's New Cottage, off Summer Street, at Manchester

The Landscape Surroundings and Gardens of THE SUMMER HOME require the most discriminating application of Landscape Art.

Natural features of sea, mountain, wild wood or hedge-row should be accentuated, not violated, and the necessarily formal lines of the architect's labors, be it bungalow or mansion, "fitted" into the landscape without harshness or rudely disturbing contrast.

A fine class of plants too, is required, different to an extent from the rather common disheartening so-called "Landscape Garden" type.

We have been specializing in this kind of garden work and this class of plants for over twenty years, and KELSEY'S HARDY AMERICAN PLANTS and CAROLINA MOUNTAIN FLOWERS are now known and used wherever fine gardens are planted. The leading North Shore places directly or indirectly have largely used our Rhododendrons, Azaleas, Andromedas, Kalmias, and other rare plants and flowers.

Catalogs gladly sent or by appointment Mr. Kelsey will call personally and advise directly on the ground.

Suntaug Lake Inn, at Lynnfield.

Chicken Dinners

Many are served, but none so satisfying as those to be obtained at the beautifully situated on the shore of the charming little lake in Lynnfield; famed for its chicken dinners and many good things, not to be duplicated in Massachusetts. ¶ The addition of a Dutch lounging room will be fully appreciated for its uniqueness and comforts, also the enlargement of the main dining room. Private dining rooms and inviting ladies' parlor.

¶ Upon 24 hours notification, any style dinner wished for will be gladly served. Special dinners for clubs and organizations served upon due notice. Those wishing dinners served upon their arrival should telephone.

WE desire to take this means to thank our many North Shore customers for their liberal patronage which has helped to make the past season the most successful in our history.

This we attribute to satisfactory dealings and excellence of our stock: fresh dug and quickly delivered. A decided advantage over long shipments.

With our extended experience of local conditions we are enabled to successfully meet the various requirements of stock, labor and planting at reasonable cost and guarantee satisfaction on all work.

In the laying out of new grounds or the re-arranging of old ones, we supply expert surveyors, foremen and planters, and make accurate and comprehensive plans and estimates, all supplemented by our personal supervision.

Our nurseries comprise some thirty acres well planted with the most desirable tested varieties of Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Roses, Vines, Hardy Plants, Fruit Trees and Small Fruits, while our resources in the way of specialties supplied by other growers and importations from abroad, of Rhododendrons, Azaleas, Magnolias, etc., are second to none.

Visitors are cordially invited to call and inspect our stock, and notify us by mail or telephone when our personal advice is desired.

Back-yard Debris

OF all kinds can go right out of sight if you are fitted with the Stephenson Underground Garbage Receivers, or the Stephenson Underfloor Refuse Receivers. Just lift a lid, throw in the trash, ashes, dirt kitchen refuse, anything.

There is no smell from it in the hottest days of summer.

The lid is flush even with the ground. Nothing in view. For 7 years on the market. A can with a reputation.

Installed on many of the finest estates at Newport, Bar Harbor, and the North Shore.

Send to us and we will send you the names of users and other literature concerning this modern necessity for summer comfort.

The

Boston Evening Transcript

IS the recognized authority among the newspapers of New England as a business man's daily? ¶Every important development in the business or financial world is faithfully recorded. The Transcript covers not only the local field, but it tells with equal care in dispatches direct from the centers of industry the latest phases in iron, steel, cotton, wool and other staple commodities. ¶In finance the Transcript is equally by itself. It presents two or more pages of financial news daily, with the latest quotations on 'Change and curb. It is the only Boston afternoon daily which publishes the complete "bid and asked" quotations for the day. It also has the distinction of being the only afternoon newspaper which gives the list of Boston stock sales for the day. ¶And, added to all this, the Transcript is one of the best edited, most carefully classified, and typographically perfect newspapers in the Eastern States.

View of Mrs. Henry L. Foote's shore-famed Rose Garden, at Devereux

Roses ...

A TRIP that is well worth one's time, is that to the "Rosery" of Mrs. Henry L. Foote at Devereux, Marblehead. Mrs. Foote has made a study of the culture of roses for fourteen years, and has now got it down to a fine point. The "Rosery" at this season of the year is at its best, although one may find roses in bloom there until November. In her gardens are over 2000 plants of more than 700 distinct varieties, of which 250 are the latest novelties in roses. Mrs. Foote makes a business of laying out rose beds and gardens, and has superintended the laying out of those on the estates of J. T. and W. S. Spaulding, which contain 3000 bushes, Mrs. E. C. Swift and many others along the North Shore, not to mention those along the Swampscott shore. Mrs. Foote extends a cordial invitation to North Shore colonists to visit the "Rosery," which is conveniently located nearly opposite the Devereux station.

What a pity flowers can utter no sound!—A singing Rose, a whispering Violet, a murmuring Canterbury Bell!—Oh, what rare and exquisite miracle these would be.—Beecher.

BEECHER was an Old-Fashioned Man—A New Englander of pure mind and sweet thoughts; to him flowers symbolized the good in the world—one of his greatest pleasures was to walk thru his garden in the early morning among the Canterbury Bells while they were yet wet with dew, and croon to them as tho they understood. 'Tis said, this was his inspiration. ¶If you want to get acquainted with all the best flowers for the garden, old fashioned or new, do not delay and visit at least once a week

NAUMKEAG NATIONAL BANK

SALEM, MASS.

CAPITAL, . . $250,000

This bank pays special attention to family accounts.

The safety and convenience of paying household bills by checks instead of keeping large amounts of currency in the house is worthy of serious consideration.

Interest is paid on deposits subject to check and depositors are invited to avail themselves of the facilities of our banking rooms.

An Old New England Homestead for Sale

IF you would like to own a genuine old New England farm house, large and comfortable, situated so as to command a fine view of the surrounding country, with large barn and other buildings in a fair state of preservation, with 20 acres of land, here is your opportunity. Brick oven in the kitchen, cider barrels in the cellar, high clock standing in the corner, spinning wheels, warming pans, old firearms and so on in the attic — everything untouched and undisturbed, as the home has been in one family for generations.

The Johnston estate (former Garland estate) which adjoins this property Hamilton.

This property adjoins one of the finest estates on the shore and will not be sold cheap. But the price is not bad if it is what you want.

Could be made an ideal summer home by some one in sympathy with old New England traditions and life, who would preserve it and supply trees, vines and piazzas.

Dainty Printing

That neat, clean appearance, that shows symmetry, balance, proportion, and appropriateness of style in the letters. You can get that kind right at our shop in Salem—if you leave it to us. Salem may seem an unlikely place to get good work, but it would surprise you to see the amount of work we get from Boston, Cambridge and other places.

Woodbury

Miss Woodbury's School for Girls Beverly, Mass.

[Extracts from Miss Woodbury's letter to parents and guardians]

The School is adapted primarily to the life of little children, therefore it is my earnest wish that children be entered as early as five years, when possible. To those not accustomed to the idea of boarding school life, five years seems young, but my experience has been that the younger the pupil is entered, the better the results in every way. I may say right here that although I must necessarily advertise my school as a "home school," in reality, I consider it nothing of the kind. From my point of view I have an exceedingly interesting and lovable little family, all of whom are bound to me, and I to them, by the ties of warmest affection, and to whom I give the best educational advantages thought and money can procure. Frankly speaking, while my school is not conducted along purely philanthropic lines, it is carried on more from my love for children and the enjoyment in the life it gives me than for any financial gain. If you are to have any experience with my school, you will, at some time, understand just what I mean. I mention it at this time to give you some idea why, under my conditions, a boarding school life for a little girl of five years can be the best possible arrangement for her. She is not "put in a school;" she is simply transferred to another home where she is just as tenderly cared for; where her little "ways" and individualities make permanent affections for her outside the family circle; and where she develops mentally, morally and physically under the most careful oversight. Here there are twelve little girls ranging from five to twelve years of age.

The Charles Head residence at Dana Beach, Manchester

Rich Men Seek Simple Life.

IN view of the rumor that George J. Gould wishes to sell his beautiful Georgian court, and that Charles M. Schwab desires to get rid of his city "palace," a cynic says: "It seems to be thoroughly millionairish to grow weary quickly of your home. Such lavishly adorned abodes seem to get on the nerves of their owners." There is a tendency among persons who can afford to to be burdened with an expensive house to seek an old farmhouse in a secluded spot and live there for several months every year. This is borne out by a report from Maine that abandoned farms of that state are being reclaimed rapidly and the opening of the vacation season finds many new visitors from other states establishing summer homes on former farms. Many of these new settlers are "going in for" apple raising.—New York "Press."

The Massachusetts Magazine

Published Quarterly

¶ One of the specialties to which this magazine is devoted is old houses. Nearly every town in Massachusetts has some old house, a historic landmark for generations, about which cluster some old legend or association that makes it celebrated in the neighborhood.

¶ Other specialties are Massachusetts biography, genealogy and general history especially that covering the period of the American Revolution.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

It is our policy to approach only the largest or best business houses to advertise in "Who's Who Along the North Shore." Any one who is familiar with business houses in this vicinity will see that in nearly every case the leaders in a given line of business are the ones represented in these pages. This is so eminently true that in most cases it would be presumptuous in ourselves to guarantee or endorse their reliability.
